ABSTRACT

The catalog lists special education materials identified by approximately 500 special educators (through the Teacher Initiated Materials Evaluation Process) as effective with handicapped and gifted children. The evaluation process is built on the premise that teachers in contact with handicapped children know the most effective materials. Materials identified by this process are arranged by exceptionality area, age level, and curriculum area. The following exceptionality areas are included: preschool handicaps; mild, trainable, and severe/profound retardation; communications handicaps; emotional handicaps; learning disabilities; deafness and hearing impairments; blindness and visual impairments; physical handicaps; multiple handicaps; and giftedness. Information on each entry includes title and publisher. A list of approximately 400 publishers and their addresses is also provided. Among curricular areas represented are professional and reference, language development, perceptual and motor skills, social development, arithmetic, reading and language arts, science, social studies, and prevocational skills. INTRODUCTION

The purpose of this publication is to list effective special education materials so that special educators can easily begin a materials selection search. All of the material reported is material which: 1) respondents own and use daily with children and, 2) respondents believe will be effective in similar teaching situations.

The problem of identifying and evaluating effective special materials is, indeed, a complex one. Many materials evaluation procedures have been developed. However, most of these efforts have been found wanting due to high cost, extensive time requirements, lack of appropriate evaluative criteria, subjective factors which determine material efficacy and a host of other problems. A closely related problem is simply determining which materials should be evaluated. This problem is further compounded by the large number of vendors offering special education and related materials. Our office has identified 1200 special education vendors and, undoubtedly, many others exist.

We believe our office has developed a mechanism for identifying effective special education materials without encountering the above mentioned problems. The solution is, as are many solutions, surprisingly simple. The procedure is called the Teacher Initiated Materials Evaluation (TIME) Process. The TIME Process is based on the premise that special educators working directly with children each have recommendations regarding the materials they are using and have used. This information can be compiled and used by other special educators searching for effective materials.

Early this school year, TIME Reporting Forms were sent to all Indiana Directors of Special Education, community agency executives, and universities. Copies of the reporting form were also distributed through the IFCEC Newsletter. The reporting forms, in postcard format to facilitate prompt response, were completed and returned by nearly 500 special educators. Each reporting form asked for effective materials to be identified by title, publisher, subject area, recommended exceptionality area and recommended level. Also, each respondent was asked to provide contact data so that firsthand information could be obtained from them directly.

The contents of this publication are arranged by exceptionality area, level and curricular area. Thus, to identify effective reading programs reported for use with primary-aged learning disabled students, one would locate the Primary-Intermediate Learning Disabled section. Within this section will be contained a Reading and Language Arts category.

Materials are listed within categories by title and corresponding publisher. Following each title will be a number (or series of numbers).

This is our respondent contact number. You may contact our office if you wish to contact the actual user/respondent of any item listed. Also, these numbers provide a frequency count of the number of times an item was reported in a category. If one number appears, the item was reported one time. If three numbers appear, three reports, etc.

All information reported was collected by our office during the 1982-83 School Year from Indiana special educators. The exceptions to this are the low incidence areas of Blind/Visually Impaired and Deaf/Hearing Impaired. The Blind section contains some data reported in previous years. This previously collected data is identifiable as there are no numbers following the titles. Some material listings in the Deaf category were reported to us by teachers from the Illinois School for the Deaf.

At the end of this publication is a directory of Selected Publishers including current addresses. In addition to identifying sources of material, this publisher's list is most useful for planning districts wishing to update current catalog collections.

Finally, we wish to thank the nearly 500 special educators who contributed to this reference. Collectively, these respondents represent thousands of years of teaching experience. We believe their recommendations should be considered whenever special educators are searching for effective materials.
